READER REACTION: FREDDIE GRAY & BALTIMORE RIOTS

On Friday, May 1, State's Attorney Marilyn Mosby announced that the six Baltimore police officers involved in the arrest of Freddie Gray had been charged criminally.

The announcement came four days after riots that began near Mondawmin Mall spread to neighborhoods throughout the city as Baltimore descended into chaos.

Cops rarely charged in police-involved deaths

Before Baltimore State's Attorney Marilyn Mosby charged six officers in the death of Freddie Gray last month, only five city officers over the past three decades have faced criminal prosecution for on-duty actions that resulted in a death. Police and prosecutors say officers' split-second decisions are not easily second guessed, and charges are brought only when evidence warrants such action.
